

UConn HEALTH

At UConn Health the Clinical Skills Assessment Program assists students as they learn bedside manners and the skills of taking a medical history, doing a physical examination, and communicating with patients. It relies on individuals trained to portray a medical problem and then evaluate students as they encounter the situation. The people who do this work are called Patient/instructors. We are recruiting individuals who have the interest and skills to work effectively with student doctors in this role.

Patient/Instructors work part-time from one half day to four half days a week. During a half-day they see 4-8 students, portray the case for each one, score the students' performance, and then usually give the students feedback. They are carefully trained before they begin working with students and must be accurate in portraying the case and scoring the students. They are also trained to give feedback to students on the content and process of their work.

We employ people of all ages who can make a commitment to working with students on specific programs. Individuals with medical problems and those with none are equally welcome. At times the Patient/Instructors own experience is used as the basis for a case, but most are authored by faculty and then matched to the age and sex of the potential Patient/Instructor.

Please complete the enclosed application and return it to the address on that paper. We will contact you when we are conducting interviews for specific programs.
